

THE ETHOS RESEARCH LEADERS FORUM

A peer leadership network and development opportunity

Register now for the Ethos Forum 7

Value and invest in leadership development

- Meet five times over a 12 month period amongst your peers in research leadership.
- Meet with some of Australia's most respected research leaders as Guest Presenters.
- Discuss your important leadership and strategic issues with some of Australia's most eminent research leaders.

More than a leadership course

This is not a course to learn the latest theory on leadership; rather it is an opportunity to meet regularly with peers from non-competing research organisations to discuss management and leadership issues confidentially and frankly. Learn from the experience of others; allow others to benefit from your wisdom.

Who should attend?

Those who benefit most from this program are researchers with leadership responsibility within a significant research concentration.

What participants have said...

'A wonderful course, excellent keynotes, learned facilitator and a great group of attendees. I would recommend it to senior research leaders with a passion for excellence in research.'

Professor McManus, PhD, MPH

Curtin University 2009

'The opportunity to meet over a period of time with a fantastic group of academics along with the input from Mark in the sessions was fantastic. Each meeting provided me with new ideas and strategies to put into practice. I looked forward to our sessions and taking time out of my busy schedule to focus on my own leadership development.'

Prof Suzanne Carrington

Head of School, QUT 2011

'I found this to be an inspiring, innovative and valuable experience and would recommend it to other aspiring research leaders across the university sector. As a Head of School I can see that the program would be exceptionally good value for staff in key leadership positions, such as research leader or research director positions within a school.'

Professor Kerry Carrington

Head of School, QUT 2011

'I gained insight into common predicaments faced, like competing demands, time management and productivity issues. It was so reassuring to hear peers facing very similar dilemmas and benefiting from hearing how they handled their own and receiving advice specific to my situation. This advice helped me to sharpen focus on research priorities and set an agenda for future research activities. The overall impact of the course built confidence in one's research strengths and also in how to handle challenges.'
